

The Petersen Automotive Museum in Los Angeles paid a tribute to the golden years, 1966 thru 1972, of the Trans-American road racing series on November 12, 2009 at the Museum.

Since the inception of the Trans-Am series in 1966, thru 1972, the rules established by the Sports Car Club of America (SCCA) primarily required cars and parts to be production items, available over the counter, to the public. It was a “Win on Sunday - Sell on Monday” bandwagon the major car manufacturers, American and foreign jumped on. The Trans-Am race results from 1966 thru 1972 can be found at www.1966shelbynotchbackmustang.com/TAresults.htm

Due to the gas shortage during the early 1970's, the public interest in the gas hungry Muscle Car ended and the consumers now looked to the economy car, putting an end to the Muscle Car era. The factories pulled out of the Trans-Am and with them, many of the top name drivers. The SCCA, to save the Trans-Am series, made major rule changes including those which permitted other cars into the series. The new rules now allowed major changes to the original Trans-Am car to make them more competitive with these new cars entering the series. Although this saved the series, it forever ended the The Golden Years of Trans-Am Racing.

A 2:00 p.m. Panel Discussion began the days events. Moderated by Dave McClelland, the subject concentrated on “Cheating in the Trans-Am”, with team members, owners, engineers, suppliers as well as the drivers themselves.

A very popular topic was that of George Follmers 125 pound helmet. Other questions included acid dipping, bolts with offset heads, body panel alterations, fuel cell and dump can capacities, fueling rigs, fuel temperature, suspension alterations and more. Many of these areas were the topic of the Bob Kovacik article found in the September 1968 issue of Sports Car Graphic magazines “How to Cheat in the Trans-Am”. Was all this really cheating or just innovative and imaginative interpretation of the rules?

After the panel discussion, an invitation was extended to the Historic Trans-Am Group, by representatives from three major vintage racing sanctioning bodies, wishing to add a Trans-Am class to their events. An indication of the popularity of The Golden Years of Trans-Am Racing.
